Commentary

It has been a horrible quarter for investors. In fact, 2018 was a horrible year.

Since 1 October, the FTSE Allshare has fallen 10.2%. Other markets were also hard hit, with the main US stock market the S&P 500 falling briefly into a bear market (defined as 20% below its peak), before a sharp bounce left it "only" 12.5% down over the quarter in dollar terms. European and Asian markets also saw sharp losses.

These moves left all major stock markets in negative territory for 2018 in local currency terms. In fact, of all the asset classes we invest in, only alternative equity and property made positive returns in 2018 and then only just.

There are several reasons for the sharp declines in stock markets. There have been signs that the global economy is slowing at the same time as interest rates have gradually been moving higher, whilst central banks have also been dialing back stimulus like quantitative easing.

In our view markets were looking expensive before the recent falls and these relatively minor changes in growth and interest rate assumptions have made investors re-evaluate equities. In addition, political risk remains elevated with President Trump's trade wars, his criticism of the Federal Reserve, and the recent government shutdown all adding to jitters.

Brexit remains a concern for UK related assets. As well as this hitting UK stocks, commercial property returns are slowing particularly in the retail sector, and funds are experiencing outflows. This has meant the Kames Property Income fund has switched from an "offer" basis to a "bid" basis, reducing the price of the fund to reflect that they may have to sell buildings, with all the costs that entails.

We have been reducing risk in this part of the portfolio, switching some into the "long lease" Time Commercial Freehold fund over the past few months.

Fixed interest has had a poor year generally.

Normally, government bonds tend to do well when equities underperform. 2018 was a year when both assets classes lost money at the same time.

Our alternative equity funds fared better, with the H2O and Carmignac funds making significant positive returns over the quarter.

Given the market conditions the fund has fallen in value. To put this into context, the average fund which holds between 20% and 60% in equities (the FE UT Mixed Investment 20%-60% Shares sector) fell by 5.05% over 12 months.

Whilst corrections such as that we have seen recently are never pleasant, this does now leave stock markets looking much better value in our view. As such, we're more positive going into 2019 than we were at the beginning of last year.

We therefore added to equity over the quarter by carrying out volatility trades, buying FTSE tracking funds as the market fell, with the intention of selling again should they recover.
