

IFSL Equilibrium Adventurous

Portfolio A Acc | November 2021

The Fund aims to deliver returns greater than inflation over a minimum of 5 years, through a combination of capital growth, that is profit on investments, and income paid out of investments, such as interest and dividends, after any charges have been taken out of the Fund. However, there is no certainty this will be achieved. Over the longer term, any 10 year period, the Fund aims to deliver an average of inflation plus 5.5% per annum. Inflation is measured as the UK Consumer Prices Index for these purposes. The Fund will invest at least 80% in other funds and investment trusts (collectively 'Investment Funds').

Commentary

Over the course of October stock markets have generally been buoyant, trending steadily upwards at a headline level. If we look under the hood, however, there has been more volatility than the headline returns would suggest. From the end of February, high growth and technology companies have lagged other more cyclical stocks more levered toward the business cycle, such as industrial and mining companies. The pick-up in demand and inflation has raised expectations of higher interest rates which have a larger impact on the valuations investors put on high growth stocks.

The penultimate week of October, however, saw the start of the reporting season in the US for technology firms, many of which announced record earnings, renewing investor confidence. The most notable move was Tesla's share price rise which led to it surpassing the $1 trillion market capitalisation mark.

In the UK, the Chancellor of the Exchequer's Budget Statement was more upbeat than generally expected given the higher growth and lower public sector borrowing forecasts. The higher pace of growth and higher inflation rates have meant that investors are watching central banks to slow their quantitative easing (bond buying) programmes and raise interest rates. The markets now expect the first interest rate hike by the Bank of England, likely from 0.1% to 0.25%, possibly this month and market commentators still expect the Federal Reserve, the US central bank, to begin to pare back its bond purchases in the next few weeks.

During October we participated in the placing of new stock in Supermarket Income REIT, increasing our holdings in a company which provides inflation-linked income by investing in property rented by large supermarket chains.
